Ridolph Von Baron, the prince of boarding-house beats, was held for the action of the grand jury by Judge Snell to-day. He was recently arrested for false pretenses. The charge was for obtaining goods from the store of Mr. Harrison, corner of North Capitol and I streets. He was also charged with obtaining board to the extent of nearly $300 from Mrs. Harwas also charged with obtaining board to the extent of nearly $300 from Mrs. Har-riet A. Harrison, the wite of Mr. Har-rison. Mrs. Harrison stated that he came to her house in December and engaged board for himself and wife and young daughter. He said he was hard up at the time, but he expected a remittance from England.

After he had been there for severa months he borrowed $11 from Mr. Har-rison, saying that he was going to New York to get some bonds that were coming to him from his grandfuther. He re-turned and witness was sick in bed. He came into her room and placed a locked and scaled box on the foot of her bed and old her for God's sake to not say a word to any one about the box, because it held $275,000 in German bonds. She got so excited by so much money being in the house that it gave her a chill. He still continued to board with her, but paid her continued to board with her, but paid her no noney, promising to pay her when he negotiated his bonds. He also borrowed $5 to go to Baltimore with. She finally got tired waiting for him to pay, and becoming suspicious of the truthfulness of his statement about the contents of the box, had it opened by a locksmith. At the direction of the court she exhibited the coments of the box. "Here is a chip of the Washington Monument, with a picture poorly painted on it," she said. "That is the most valuable article in it." The balance consisted of sheets of coarse That is the most valuable article in it. The balance consisted of sheets of coarse wrapping paper, a book and some stationery. He also victimized Judge Snell's boarding-house on H street. The wife of the accused sat beside him, and they both sat smilling when the box was opened. Mrs. Harrison stated that her husband took a note of the defendant for $200, which was never paid. which was never paid.

The Marriage of Miss Tucker.

Miss Emma Beverly Tucker, daughter of the late Dr. David H. Tucker of Richmond, Va., and granddaughter of the late Hon. George M. AMATEUR INDIAN FIGHTERS.

The Inglorious End of a War of Extermination. Sixteen-year-old Jimmy Brooks, who earns 87 a week cutting printing blocks in a New York wall-paper factory, had been reading yellow-covered novels about Indian fighters. He told fifteen-year-old Johnny Ward and William H. Green that he was going to start on an expedition to exterminate the Indians on Thursday, Young Green wanted to wear long trousers, but his three sisters wouldn't let him. Brooks told him that he would buy him the long trousers out of his war funds if he joined the expedition. On Thursday morning Green ran away from home armed with a small cartridge pistol, but no ammunition, and accompanied Brooks to the bank, where the latter had deposited $0 of savings out of his wages. Ward and 25-year-old Enis Wilkins, a newsman, joined them after the money was paid by the bank cashier, and they newsman, joined them after the money was paid by the bank cashier, and they rode out to New Brunswick on a Pennsylvania train. There Brooks got a barber to clip Ward's hair with a horse-shearer so that the Indians could not sealp him, and having hired a gun for $3 from a New Brunswick farmer, started for Rock Hill. N. J., after the redskins. They bought $1 worth of powder and ball on their way.

They hunted around five hours without finding any Indians or anybody clse who wanted to light, and returned the gun to the farmer and spent $2.75 for as much dinner as they could hold. All four found a surreptitious bed in a New Brunswick hencoop on Thursday night, and in the morning young Ward got tired of fighting Indians altogether and induced a kind-heatted conductor on the Central Railroad to carry him to Jersey City. There he begged three cents to pay his ferriage and walked home foot-sore, nearly bald-headed, and unmistakably repentant.

Brooks, Green, and Wilkins sneaked aboard the next train when the conductor wasn't looking. They had just thirteen cents left, and proposed to go to Texas with it to see if Indians were more plentiful there than in New Jersey. The conductor put them off at Elizabeth. The Chief of Police Jenkins, suspecting they were runaways, locked them up and got them to confess the fact. A visitor recognized young Green and asked to have him sent home. His three sisters in New York said that they would make him wear girls' clothes for a week to punish him.

After the Lawyers Nothing.

Soon after Senator Sumner became chair-onn of the Senate Committee on Foreign man of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, says Ben: Perley Poore in the Boston Budget, there was referred to it the claim of Alexander J. Atocha, for $500,000, He was a courtly, dignified old Mexican hidalgo, who claimed damages because of his friendship to the American army. He lost his claim, but subsequently, after Atocha died, his widow and children re-erved a judgment in the Court of Claims ceived a judgment in the Court of Claims for $400,000, which was to be paid out of the special indemnity fund. That fund, however, had become reduced, so that the balance available was only a little mor than $200,000. Out of this the lawyers re ceived large fees, although it was reporte that General Butler was half an hour lat in appearing at the Treasury Departmen to claim his. After the settlement of all the claims there only remained for distribution about $20,000, of which the widew received $6.250, and each of the three shidren $1.157.
